Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, today marks the opening of a gala, weeklong festival at Muskegon, Mich., in the congressional district which I am proud to represent.

Greater Muskegon's second annual Seaway festival runs from June 30, through July 7. It will serve our State and the Nation as an impressive reminder of the great step forward which was taken by Congress when it authorized and appropriated funds to develop the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Muskegon, largest city on Lake Michigan's east shore, boasts the finest natural deepwater harbor on the Great Lakes, improved by the Federal Government at a cost of $3 million. It is formed by Muskegon Lake and connected with Lake Michigan by a channel 6,050 feet long, 240 feet wide, and 21 feet deep. There are 17 commercial docks, public and private, serving local industries through 12 oversea ship lines and all lake shipping lines. No tugs are required for berthing or turnaround. More than 4 million tons of cargo are handled annually. There is shipside rail and truck service.

Opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway in 1959 made Michigan the principal maritime State on the Nation's new fourth seacoast. Now 80 percent of the world's merchant fleet can reach Michigan seaports, 19 of which handle a million or more tons of shipping annually.

Michigan's future in world trade is assured. It ranks third among the 14 leading industrial States in productivity as measured both by value added per production worker and by value added per man-hour. Michigan has a highly diversified skilled labor force, manning 365 different types of industry found within the State.

Muskegon is highly favored in this industrial complex by its outstanding selection of industrial sites with exceptional advantages, including water for transportation, for industry, and for recreation. Muskegon pioneered in the development of the industrial foundation plan through which building requirements of new industries were met under a loan plan.

Now a community of more than 100,000 persons, Muskegon sprang from a fur trading post; earned its first title in 1887 as "Lumber Queen of the World" and its second title in World War II as an "Arsenal of Democracy."

One of Muskegon's distinguished citizens, John C. Beukema, served on the St. Lawrence Seaway Board. He and other leaders there long have recognized the city's potential in world trade. It was this sort of farsightedness that led to staging of the first seaway festival last summer and now to planning for the second annual seaway festival.

The spacious L. C. Walker Sports Arena, where many of the indoor festival events will be held, was dedicated by the Vice President of the United States on October 27, 1960. The arena also is home of the famed Muskegon Zephyrs Hockey Team, 1962 champions of the International Hockey League and winners of the Turner Cup.

Mr. Speaker, this year's seaway festival will be a land-sea-air-space affair, with attractions ranging from flying demonstrations to displays of a three-stage 75-foot Atlas missile of the type that rockets Lt. Col. John Glenn into orbit, and a Snark missile. If plans work out, Colonel Glenn's globe-circling capsule Friendship 7 will be there too.

The Blue Angels, famed Navy precision flying team, will take to the air over Muskegon on July 4, preceded and followed by the Navy's Starflight gymnastics team. The woman member of the gymnastic team is Mary L. Hutchins, a WAVE from Muskegon stationed at the Naval Air Base Training Command headquarters, Pensacola, Fla.

The Navy Department has been directed to arrange July 4 visits by surface units, and festival directors are hopeful of securing appearance of an Atlantic fleet submarine, destroyer, or other vessel. Lt. Comdr. Harold Minard, officer in charge of Muskegon's Naval Training Center and a festival director, says Ninth District Naval headquarters has approved a weekend visit by two PCE's of the Great Lakes Naval Training Squadron.

Other events will include a "Nationality Night" program; Brunswick Cup races sanctioned by the Michigan Outboard Racing Association; jazz concert; carnival midway; ox roast; sports car gymkana; Miss Michigan pageant; Woodland antique auto tour; and dedication of the McGraft Park Bandshell, featuring music of the West Shore Symphony, Muskegon Community Band, and the Cosmopolitan Male Chorus.

Mr. Speaker, all this should make clear that Muskegon's second annual seaway festival, June 30 to July 7, will be a great success and that Muskegon and her sister cities throughout Michigan's Water Wonderland are entering a new era of progress made possible by the St. Lawrence Seaway and expanding world trade.
